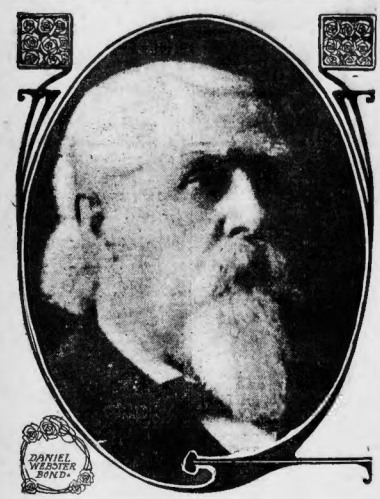
SPEAKER COLE BEFORE GRAND JURY 11 MINUTES



JUDGE DANIEL W. BOND.
He is directing the Grand Jury in its investigation of the legislative bribery scandal.

Head of House of Representatives Examined This Afternoon in the Bribery Case—Investigation Not Complete When the Body Adjourned This Afternoon.

Speaker John N. Cole of the Massachusetts House of Representatives was before the Grand Jury for eleven minutes to-day, as a witness in the inquest instituted by District Attorney John B. Moran into the legislative bribery scandal. He appeared at the Suffolk County Court House at 3 o'clock, and was in the District Attorney's office for five minutes, after which he entered the Grand Jury room, accompanied by Mr. Moran and Assistant District Attorney Dennison. He came from the room at 3:16.

"I did not make arrangement with Mr. Moran as to further investigation," he told the reporters in the corridors, "nor as to the presence of members of the House here. I am here simply as a witness. I came to appear before the Grand Jury in accordance with my summons."

About 15 or 18 members of the House were on hand after the noon recess of the Grand Jury—nearly all of them Boston men. The District-Attorney excused the remainder for the present. When the Grand Jury resumed its sitting after lunch it considered routine cases from 2:40 to 3 o'clock, and then examined Speaker Cole. After he came out Representative Street of Adams entered the room.

He came out at 3:25 and Mueling of Lawrence went in, emerging at 3:32. Graham of Lawrence followed him, entering the room at 3:33 and remaining seven minutes. Then Representative Allen of Brockton was called and passed into the room.

Representatives Wright of South Hadley, Walsh of Falmouth, Keese of Fall River, Bemis of Cambridge, Rockwood of Franklin and Endicott of Chelsea were then examined, each being before the Grand Jury but a few minutes. Then, at 4:04, the Grand Jury adjourned, and notified all remaining legislators that they were excused until further notice. This is taken to mean until the June session.

The regular list of indictments for the present sitting will be reported to the court to-morrow morning. Whether or not any has been found in connection with the bribery scandal is of course unknown, although rumors that at least one indictment will be brought in have been common.

District Attorney Moran would not answer a question put to him by the reporters late in the afternoon. Whether he plans to hear the remainder of the Representatives next month, or is in any way satisfied with the progress that has been made, is a matter he would not speak upon.

ANGERED BY DELAY.

Some of the legislators became quite doubtful when they were seemingly reached. Representative Allen of Brockton, the dean of the House, when he left the Court House for Beacon Hill at 9:45 this morning, after having waited since 8 to be called, said he should not return until after the Legislature had finished its session. The delay in reaching him was due to the action of the Grand Jury in taking up routine cases before proceeding to the bribery inquest. He returned this afternoon, however, and took his turn before the Grand Jury.

ARREST BARRE WOMAN ON MURDER CHARGE

MRS. MYRA BEMIS, ACCUSED OF GIVING FATAL POISON DRAUGHT, HELD BY POLICE.

Special to the Boston American.

BARRE, Mass., May 11.—Charged with the murder by poison of John Hammond, who died at her farm on Nov. 27, 1905, Mrs. Myra Bemis was arrested to-day by State Detective Murray and Deputy Sheriff Rice.

She was brought to Barre Centre by the officers, and taken to Hotel Barre to await a train that would carry them to Worcester.

Before leaving Barre she was arraigned before Trial Justice Walker. She pleaded not guilty and was held without bail for the next Grand Jury, which meets next week.

Some time after his death Hammond's relatives began an inquiry as to the whereabouts of a sum of money which they said he had. David Hammond of Malden engaged Attorney John F. Hurley of Boston and as a result of his investigation Hammond's body was exhumed a month after his death.

Said Death from Tremens.

Dr. E. P. Bixby, the attending physician, had said that Hammond died from delirium tremens. The examination of the stomach and other organs made by Professor Whitney of Harvard, University, however, caused the county authorities to continue their investigation of the case, and this resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Bemis to-day.

Their belief that there had been foul play was strengthened by the fact that Mrs. Bemis, after Hammond's death, had drawn from a savings bank in Ware a portion of the $1,500 that he had there. She had sued for the money which she said Hammond had given her before he died.

At the time the order was issued for the exhumation of the body Mrs. Bemis made this statement to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

Mrs. Bemis's Statement.

"John Hammond died a natural death. He died of delirium tremens. The public certainly should be satisfied with the report of Dr. E. P. Bixby, who signed the death certificate. Dr. Bixby saw Hammond every day he was ill, and would certainly have known if the man died of any kind of poisoning.

"The first time that I saw Hammond was on June 19. He answered an advertisement which I placed in the Boston papers for a hired man. After he had been here a few days I saw that he was not the man I wanted, as he was physically unfit to do any manual labor. I told him I would not keep him. He felt very badly and told me that he had not a relative in the world. He begged me to let him stay around the farm for his board. He said he would do what work he could without any cash payment if I would only give him a home. He told me that he had a little money in the banks in Ware and Amherst. He said that he would willingly give it to me if I would care for him until he died.

Gave Her Money Order.

"I thought the matter over a few days and finally decided to let him stay. He gave me an order on the Ware Savings Bank for $1,000. I kept the order for some time and did not cash it, but he kept asking me to get the money, saying: 'If you do not get it I will spend it for drink.' Finally, on November 22, I went to Ware and secured the money. I told the cashier of the bank the whole story and he said he was glad John had acted so sensibly.

"I have also an order on the Amherst Savings Bank, and when I get ready I shall take that cashed also. The money is rightfully mine. During his illness I cared for him as none of his own relatives would. I doctored him continually for several months. He did not want a physician, but I insisted and sent for Dr. Bixby. I paid Dr. Bixby with my own money. I paid for medicine also."

On January 26, 1892, Mrs. Bemis was brought into the limelight of publicity by burying on the farm a two-year-old child which died at her home. She neglected to notify the authorities, who learned of the matter and investigated it. Chairman Spencer of the Board of Health told a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN that Mrs. Bemis did not realize that a body could not be buried without a permit. The child's name was Margaret Sargent. She secured her from an institution in Boston.

CHARGE CHURCH BRIBED BY STANDARD OIL MEN

CHICAGO, May 11.—Wholesale bribery of the Ohio ministry by agents of the Standard Oil Company was the sensational revelation made to-day before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Letters and other documentary evidence that showed how the Ohio ministry had not only accepted, but in several instances had solicited bribes, in return for votes was brought out, to the amusement of a score of auditors.

The methods of securing these ministerial agents was to give them free oil for their churches and their personal use.

In return the preachers advocated among their parishioners the use of only Standard Oil to the exclusion of competitive oils. Also, according to the letters shown, many of them gave "testimonials" for the products of the Standard Oil Trust.

These "testimonials" said that it would be advisable for church attendants to listen to the persuasions of the salesmen and then buy only the Rockefeller product.

LYNCH MOB FOILED BY QUAKER CITY POLICE

MEN AND WOMEN ENRAGED AT NEGRO WHO BRUTALLY BEAT WIFE ON STREET.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 11.—Through the daring bravery of a policeman, William White, a negro, thirty-two years old, of No. 1,234 Wood street, was to-day saved from being strung up to a cross-arm of a big telegraph pole at Eighth and Callowhill streets.

White was surrounded by a mob of about fifteen men of his own color, all of them yelling "Lynch him! Lynch him!" while those nearest the object of wrath kicked, pulled and pummelled him as much as close quarters would permit, when the policeman arrived. One man had already gone for a rope.

The man had just beaten his wife, Annie, brutally. He grasped her by the collar and was pounding her face with his fist. Then he took her by the hair and continued the beating. A number of men, both white and colored, saw the act.

Then the crowd gathered. The negro would not let off beating the woman, but he was finally pulled away and the mob began to beat him. It was then that the policeman interfered.

MANY BOSTON PEOPLE LOSERS IN BOND CASE

Hundreds of Boston people may be heavy losers through the results of the prosecutions against the American Bond Reserve Company, the head offices of which are in Chicago. On April 30 the local bondholders, through Attorney Edward E. Clark, of 30 Court street, applied for an injunction restraining the company from doing business in the State or from removing any of its property from the State. A few days later this was granted.

Now comes dispatches from Chicago that those who are pushing the prosecutions there think that there will be over 1,000,000 in the thirty or forty States in which the bond company has operated. Injunctions against it have been issued in Illinois and in Kentucky, under the laws of which State it operates.

CARL SCHURZ BETTER.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The condition of Carl Schurz, who was reported last night to be dying at his home, No. 24 East Ninety-first street, was stated to be somewhat improved to-day by his physician, Dr. A. Jacoby. Dr. Jacoby also says there is no immediate danger.

PAPER TRUST SURRENDERS IN U. S. COURT

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 11.—The United States Government to-day secured an unconditional surrender of the so-called "paper trust" in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Sanborn. The attorney-general began a suit on December 27, 1904, to dissolve an alleged combination between the General Paper Company and twenty-three other defendants and enjoin them from doing business as they were then doing on the ground that an agreement had been entered into by the defendants in restraint of interstate commerce.

Mr. Kellogg, for the government, and Mr. Flanders for the defendants, appeared before Judge Sanborn, sitting as a circuit judge, and Mr. Kellogg moved that the mandate from the United States Supreme Court affirming the order that the witnesses must testify be filed. Judge Sanborn ordered the mandate filed.

The witnesses then appeared before the United States examiners and offered to testify. The defendants then withdrew their answers. Mr. Kellogg announced that the Government did not care to examine the witnesses and moved for a decree in favor of the Government. Judge Sanborn ordered that the decree be entered for the Government for the relief prayed, and that the decree should be settled on June 16. The proceedings before the court and examiner were then adjourned.

FIGHT L CARS ON RIVER DAM

The Charles River Dam Commission has refused to acquiesce on any bill permitting the construction of an elevated structure for the use of surface cars alone across the river. The commission does not oppose the running of elevated trains or cars upon the slope of the dam on the down river side, provided that they shall leave a subway on the Boston side and enter a subway on the Cambridge side.

INJUNCTION AGAINST CITY

Chief Justice Aiken to-day granted a temporary injunction restraining the city of Boston from interfering with work on the new Brookline street bridge over the Charles river between Brighton and Cambridge.

This is a result of the complaints made to the Mayor by the labor unions that contracts had been let which did not contain the eight-hour clause.

HUB'S FINEST TO PARADE WENDSEDAY

For the first time in four years the police of Boston will parade next Wednesday afternoon. They will march through the streets in two battalions, comprising eight companies. Each company will consist of a captain, one lieutenant, two sergeants and fifty men. Superintendent Pierce will be in command, with Captain Dennis Donovan of Station 16 adjutant. The line will form on Commonwealth avenue at 1:15 o'clock, and the start made promptly at 2.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS FELT IN INDIANA

PETERSBURG, Ind., May 11.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt at 12:50 o'clock this morning. Buildings shook so violently that people jumped from their beds. The second shock followed the first at an interval of forty seconds. A vivid flash, similar to lightning, and a low rumbling noise from the west preceded the first shock.

THIRD SWIFT TRIAL STILL ON

The trial of Timothy J. Swift, former assistant custodian of the Boston postoffice building, was resumed to-day before Judge Dodge in the United States Circuit Court in this city. Edward S. Field, assistant superintendent of delivery, was the chief witness, being cross-examined by John H. Casey, counsel for Swift. Swift is charged with being guilty of accepting graft, the allegation being that he received money illegally in connection with the letting of contracts for supplies for the Boston postoffice.

Mr. Field was questioned as to whether he was interested in a certain kind of letter case which he had had patented, and which is supplied to postoffices. The point of the cross-examination was as to whether Field's figuring in the case against Swift was not in some measure due to the latter's refusal to secure such supplies. Field to-day denied that such was the case.

TRINITY 45½, HOLY CROSS 44½.

WORCESTER, May 11.—The Trinity College track team defeated the Holy Cross team, 45½ to 44½ points, this winning the meet by a single point in an exciting dual track meet.

KILLS COLLEGE TAXATION BILL

The college taxation bill for the taxation of certain college properties was killed to-day, when the Senate refused to substitute the bill for the adverse report of the committee.

Senator Seibelich in his argument against substituting the bill, declared that he feared that many of the colleges would move out of the State if their property were to be taxed, and quoted the business men of Northampton, who told him that their business falls off over one-half when Smith College is not in session.

MAYOR TO CORRECT SUBWAY WORK CRUSH

Mayor Fitzgerald, thoroughly dissatisfied with the condition of Washington street in the section where the subway work is being carried on, to-day instructed Chief Engineer Sullivan to take personal charge of this work, for which he declares he will hold Mr. Sullivan responsible.

WILL THE GOBLIN GET 'IM?

SEEK NOISELESS PAVEMENT FOR WASHINGTON ST.

Merchants' Petition Goes Before the Mayor for Consideration.

CITY AND "L" MAY PAY BILL.

A petition asking that some noiseless pavement be laid on Washington street, between Beach and Milk, in place of the granite blocks, signed by most of the business firms in that section of the city, is before Mayor Fitzgerald for his consideration.

Among the firms that have signed the petition are Mechanics' Trust Company, Charles E. Laurlat, Boston Clothing Store, Collins & Fairbanks, Jordan, Marsh & Co., E. H. White Company, A. Shuman, J. A. Houston Company, G. N. Talbot, Gilchrist & Co., W. H. Richardson Company, R. H. Horne Company, Noyes Bros., T. H. Lane Company and C. L. Yorke.

May Do Work Jointly.

While the Transit Commission is bound to replace the pavement, the company is called upon only to put the street in its original condition. It is thought to lay the street with asphalt would cost at least $100,000. An arrangement between the city and the railroad may be made by which they can do the work in conjunction, the city paying for the improvement over the granite block system.

Charles H. Collins, head of the Collins & Fairbanks Company, and father of the noiseless pavement plan, said:

"Nearly six months ago President Barrett of the Common Council and myself discussed the desirability of getting a better pavement. I knew that the transit commission would have to replace the pavement in as good a condition as it found it and thought that it might be arranged with the commission that they would put down concrete, asphalt or some of the noiseless pavements in place of the present stone blocks.

"In bring the matter to the attention of the Mayor I prepared a petition that is now in the Mayor's hands, and personally secured some of the leading names that appear upon it."

"Suppose, Mr. Collins, that the expense should be $100,000 or more, would you say that in view of the financial condition of the city that the Mayor would be justified in carrying out your plan?" he was asked.

"Why, certainly. Nothing can cost too much that is to benefit the city as materially. With the new subway in operation Washington street is to be our great retail street, the greatest in the world, and a good pavement must be put down."

To Ascertain Cost.

Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"I understand the transit commissioners are willing to lay asphalt if we can make an suitable arrangement regarding the cost. There are some objections to the change both from teamsters and from the way the pavement has been under the treatment of teamsters of other cities. I have not had time to look into the matter, but shall do so."

Superintendent of Streets James H. Lyons will soon set to ascertain the cost of the proposed pavement, and what kind would be best adapted to the needs of the street if a change is decided upon.

2 DEAD, 4 INJURED IN CAVE-IN AT WORCESTER

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, May 11.—Two men were killed and four probably fatally injured in the collapse of the southwest wall of the new stone building which the Central Supply Company is building at the corner of Commercial and Foster streets, which buried under three feet of masonry and earth six workmen in a trench at its base at 8:30 a. m. to-day. When the victims were removed it was found that two had been killed, and that four were in so serious a condition that they will probably die.

THE DEAD.

FLOODY, THOMAS, stone mason, of Shrewsbury street.
Unidentified Italian.

THE INJURED.

WALSH, MICHAEL.
CAOLLOTTI, JOSEPH.
FOLLETTE, FRANK.
GIBBONS, MICHAEL.

Within less than three minutes after the accident twenty-five persons were tearing at the pile of stone, many with their bare hands, in a desperate effort to rescue the buried men, two of whom were crying in piteous tones for relief.

"We can hold on just about two minutes, gents," came a muffled voice.

"We'll be there in less than that," was the prompt reply.

Piteous scenes followed the bringing of the bodies to the light. Several of the families of the workmen had been told that there had been an accident, and Mrs. Floody, wife of Thomas Floody, was almost the first to gaze upon her dead husband's mangled form.

All the injured men, together with both of those killed, have been taken to the City Hospital, and the two latter placed temporarily in the morgue.

No cause is given for the accident yet, and both Frank Laughlin, the foreman in charge of the work, and Michael Kane of Worcester, the contractor, refuse to make a statement at this time.

CRACKED HANDS FROM BOYHOOD

Wonderful and Satisfactory Result Obtained by Use of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment at Expense of 75c. — Hands Now Well.

ANOTHER CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My trouble has been cracked hands, or more correctly, ends of the fingers, from boyhood. I used all known remedies, the only benefit received being temporary relief by filling the little cracks or fissures with hot wax, pitch, tar, etc., to be frequently renewed to stop pain. On the 21st day of February last I purchased of W. A. Bibber, druggist of Richmond, one box each of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, using freely, according to directions—result, wonderful and satisfactory. At this writing my hands are perfectly well. I have secured a second instalment of the Cuticura Remedies, and do not intend to discontinue the use of either." Wm. Patterson, Country Road, Dresden, Me.

LOBBYIST "JACK" FLEMING ON MORAN'S RACK AT GRAND JURY BRIBE INQUIRY

of most members of the Legislature, was on the rack in the office of Assistant District Attorney Moran for nearly a quarter of an hour to-day, while 150 members of the House of Representatives were assembled at the Suffolk County Court House awaiting their turn to testify before the grand jury.

Mr. Moran, after his interview, allowed Fleming to leave the Court House without taking him before the Grand Jury.

The legislators were allowed to go to the State House in time to attend the opening of the House, except ten or a dozen, comprising the first "block" desired as witnesses. The Grand Jury, after a conference with Judge Bond, at which no outsiders were present, continued their investigation into legislative conditions.

EX-GOVERNOR'S SON FAILS TO RESPOND.

Representative Charles A. Andrews of Holyoke was the first to be called. He entered the Grand Jury room at 10:50 and emerged at 11:08. The officer then called for Representative William H. Ames of North Easton, son of the late Governor Ames. Mr. Ames was not present, but a fact that was reported to the Grand Jury.

Gideon B. Abbott, representative from Ward 24, Boston, was then called, and went before the Grand Jury at 11:26. He remained in the room for twenty-six minutes and was followed by Representative Arthur W. Baker of Lynn.

Then followed in quick succession eleven other members of the House. Baker of Lynn was before the grand jury for eighteen minutes, Andrews of Holyoke for nineteen minutes, and Gleason of Pittsfield for twenty-six minutes. These three latter men came out looking as though they had been put through a strong examination. The others in the list were before the jury from five to ten minutes.

While Mr. Abbott was before the Grand Jury the first clash of authority between that body and the Legislature loomed up. It did not become acute, apparently, due to the temperate instructions of Speaker Cole of the House.

State House Doorkeeper Pedrick appeared in the Court House and with much dignity asked for Clerk Manning, to whom he said that he had been notified by Speaker Cole to come to the Court House and retain with him the witness there, as they were needed for a vote. Clerk Manning referred the messenger to District Attorney Moran.

Giving his name and official position at the door of the Grand Jury room, Mr. Pedrick waited while the officer on duty notified the district attorney, and when Mr. Moran came out repeated his message.

"All right, said Mr. Moran, to whom you please. They are not here before me. It is the Grand Jury's business."

INSISTS ON HIS FEE.

Thereupon Mr. Pedrick, apparently in obedience to definite instructions, selected about fifteen members and marched them back to the State House, leaving nine in readiness to appear before the Grand Jury.

Among the "fifteen" of the forenoon were the importance of "Jim Bill" Dunham of Nantucket, who arrived in hot haste and insisted upon at once receiving his fee for attendance "yesterday morning" and the lacing of a large group of legislators in the court room, coming directly from one of the court rooms, whither they had gone to smoke, by a sheriff's court officer who had suggested they could smoke there.

The Representatives arrived early. There were a considerable number on hand long before any court officers. Among the earliest to appear were Representatives Ward of Rockland, Turner of Great Barrington, Weeks of Boston, Weeks of Everett, Grainger of Lawrence, Coughlin of Agawam, Nason of Haverhill, Norcross of Monson, Gleason of Pittsfield, Lowell of Newton, Tooling of Boston and Parker of Lynn. By the time these had gathered members began to arrive in great numbers.

FLEMING LOOKS PALE.

"Jack" Fleming came in at 9:05 o'clock. He was very quiet and noticeably pale. He smiled very little as he exchanged salutations with members at the House.

The fact that Fleming had been summoned is taken to indicate that the Grand Jury is to investigate the killing of the Overman bill by the Senate, which was one of the most scandalous proceedings of the present session.

Fleming will be remembered, sat within the members' rail of the Senate on the Friday afternoon when the leaders of the two branches of the Legislature agreed to the killing of the overman bill, and called Senator Washburn to the rostrum to announce that for whatever instructions he had given the eyes of every body present.

It was the boldest lobbying seen this year on Beacon Hill, made necessary by the imminent danger of defeat for the measure proposed. This was the bill whose defeat by the absence of four Senators was lamented by most unwise methods, including a fake telegram to Senator Bulkley, all of which were exposed in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Five minutes later District Attorney Moran entered his office and at once dismissed to his lunch room. At that time the Grand Jury was assembling, but had made no move to meet.

As the investigation proceeds the legislators appear to become more and more impressed with the real seriousness of their position. The early comparatively flippant demeanor of the undoubted members and its desire to learn about mileage, fees and other matters has given way to an appreciation of their position seemed to have come to them, and the comparatively few of the investigation they had failed to entertain the public's perspective.

A few continue to appear to misunderstand the situation. Representative Frazer of Boston, the bitterest enemy of District Attorney Moran in the House, was one of those to-day. He talked loudly and vituperatively in the corridors to any Representative who would listen, calling the impending visit of the legislators an outrage and declaring that it was time the Legislature should execute its powers and settle, once and for all, whether or not it is operated by the district attorney of Suffolk county. Mr. Frazer has been endeavoring to introduce a bill in the House that will in some manner legislate Mr. Moran out of office.

At 9 o'clock the grand jury entered into a courtroom and conferred with Judge Bond.

ANNA REJECTS PEACE OVERTURES BY BONI

PARIS, May 11.—Count Boni de Castellane and his wife, Countess Anna, who is suing for divorce, appeared before Judge Dufo this afternoon, when the latter attempt to effect a reconciliation between the parties, as required by French law. He was unable.

Countess Anna, however, rejected all overtures of reconciliation. The suit for divorce will be filed now in consequence of the failure of the attempt at effecting a settlement of their differences.

FRISCO BANKS WILL RE-OPEN MONDAY, MAY 21

First Building Permit Allows Erection of a 10-Story Building at Once.

CITY BONDS ALL SAFE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 11.—On Monday, May 21, all commercial banks of the city will open their doors for regular business. Although the announcement has not been made officially, it is known that a final agreement has been reached.

Examination of the valuts are being made. So far all are in good condition, and the banks could reopen at once if they had suitable places.

The first building permit for permanent construction was issued to Colonel Magee, who will erect a ten-story building on Sicket street, west of Kearney.

A $10,000,000 corporation that will play an important part in the work of rebuilding San Francisco was brought into existence when the articles of incorporation were filed with the county clerk to-day. The corporation, which is to take the name of the "Los Leonard Bevon Company," will embrace New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles capital.

The main vault of the City Auditor's office has been opened and everything contained therein was found to be intact, including the bonds issued for $17,500,000 for specific permanent improvements, such as school buildings, the acquisition of parks, etc. Besides these all of the official bonds of the present city officials, books, vouchers and financial accounts of the city tax collector, treasurer and State controller and treasurer were found intact.

GIVES $50 TO THE HEARST RELIEF FUND

Fifty dollars for the Hearst relief fund for the San Francisco sufferers has been donated by Cornell 1. Marquise de Nyendael, of the Royal Michaelense Benevolent Association of this city. The order is one of the most prominent Portuguese associations of Greater Boston.

JUDGE ENJOINS TACK COMPANY

In behalf of Mrs. Lydia P. Thomson, Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Court today granted an injunction against the bondholders' committee of the Atlas Tack Corporation, restraining them from paying over to Martha P. Hardy, receiver for H. S. Leighton & Company, who failed here last December, certain dividends amounting to $934 on stock of the tack corporation, which Leighton & Company held as collateral of Mrs. Thomson.

Mrs. Thomson, in bill, recited that she had turned over to Leighton & Company $1500 in cash and three shares of the Atlas Bondholders' Trust and 320 shares of the Two Manhattan Copper Company of Arizona. She alleges she cannot collect dividends on her stock because it is held by Leighton's receiver.

BOY ESCAPES FROM POLICE

John H. Heuneberry, aged fourteen years, escaped from the Somerville police station to-day by jumping from a window after he had been sentenced to the Lyman School for breaking, entering and larceny.

Three other boys and young Heuneberry were sentenced by Judge Wentworth in the Somerville Police Court this forenoon. Heuneberry had been placed in charge of Patrolman Fuller while his father was making arrangements for bail, as the case was appealed.

CHURCH UNSAFE; WORK STOPPED

Building Commissioner Charles Logue won his first victory in the Superior Court to-day against violators of the building laws of the city of Boston when Chief Justice Aiken, sitting in equity session, granted an injunction restraining the congregation of Adath Jesurnna from proceeding with the erection of their synagogue in Blue Hill avenue until they had conformed with the orders of the building commissioner.

Inspector Turner testified that the rear wall of the synagogue was too thin to conform to the regulations, and that a retaining wall in the rear of the building had fallen in and that the supports of the building were generally unsafe.

ZULUS FLOCK TO JOIN REBELS

DURBAN, Natal, May 11.—The most serious news from the Zululand insurrection was received to-day. Advices state that many Zulus are joining the rebels under the leadership of Dinizulu, and that the colonial troops are being hurried up to intercept and prevent a junction of the rebels. Sanguinary fighting is expected to immediately follow the appearance of the colonial troops on the scene.

LAUNDRY QUESTION STIRS SOMERVILLE

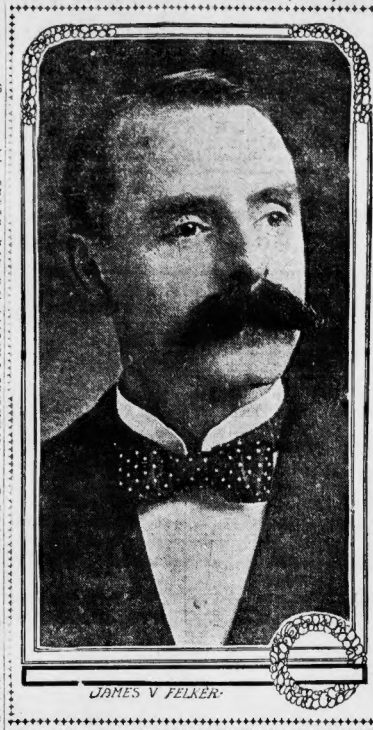
After a two hours' wrangle last night, the Somerville Aldermen, unable to decide whether a laundry was necessary to the welfare of the residents, laid the question on the table to be considered on another evening.

There is no laundry in somerville now and over twenty residents protested against allowing the washing of clothes within the city limits.

$4,000 VERDICT FOR NEGRO.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 11.—The sixth trial of the now famous case of the negro Edward Johnson, against the New York Central Railroad, resulted to-day in a verdict of $4,000 damages for the plaintiff.

WIFE STANDS BY OFFICIAL HELD FOR THEFT OF $86,000



JAMES V. FELKER.

TREASURER CHARGED WITH $50,000 THEFT

Newburyport's City Treasurer Still in Jail Unable to Get $10,000 Bonds Demanded.

NEWBURYPORT, May 11.—Encouraged by the fact that his wife still has confidence in him, in spite of his confession that he is a defaulter, James V. Felker, the city treasurer, who admits that he is $86,500 short in his accounts, is still in the Newburyport jail, unable to secure the $10,000 bail demanded by the court.

Mr. Felker has made no statement to-day except to say that the amount of his shortage will be $86,500 instead of $50,000 as at first supposed. His counsel, Attorney Bartlett, also refuses to talk. Mrs. Felker, while she professes her faith in her husband, says she knows nothing about his affairs.

The exact amount of the shortage was left to Mayor Houston by Felker to-day. The treasurer said that $50,000 was in city notes, which he had sold in the open market, and the remainder was in cash.

Felker went home to his home last night by the city marshal to break the news to his wife and daughter. Both were prostrated and are unable to see visitors today.

Felker is said to have told Mayor Houston that he lost a large amount of money in mining stocks, but that he believes that he can realize enough on his investments within thirty days to pay the defalcation.

The city government will meet to-night to discuss the case and to make arrangements to have no expert examine the books.

Felker was arrested at midnight, and a special session of the police court held to consider his case, was placed under $10,000 bonds.

A close watch was kept on him all night for fear that he might do himself an injury, as he was in such a condition as to be likely that an entire breakdown was feared.

When confronted with the charges last night he broke down and begged for mercy, saying that he could make good all the city lost by his juggling of public funds.

Felker's arrest and the alleged shortage in the city treasury were a great surprise to those who heard of it last night, as he has been in office for fifteen years and was highly respected, belonging to many of the fraternal organizations in the city.

Mayor Houston was the first person to suspect Felker's defalcation. A few days ago he received a note from the Institution of Savings in Rowley, stating that it had purchased a note for $25,000 on the city of Newburyport. Mayor Houston was at once wished information as to the reasons for the note being issued and asking if it was all right.

TO FIGHT FOR PETITION UNDER SLIDING SCALE

Salem Man Announced Intention to Save People's Rights in Proposed Bill.

INFORMATION ASKED FOR

Right of petition for better gas service and prices will not be taken from the people by the "sliding scale" scheme without a fight.

Representative Thomas I. Davis of Salem warned the House to-day that he will offer an amendment giving not only Salem or a city and 25 others if a town the right to petition for lower rates and better service under the operation of the proposed bill.

Although Attorneys George W. Anderson and Louis D. Brandeis endorsed the "sliding scale" gas bill as being approved by the Public Franchise League, Representative William Brigham of Marlboro told the House that the Public Franchise League did not approve the bill, but viewed it as a barrier against a reduction in the price of gas for ten years, and after that period allowed the company to increase the price

After the Facts.

To learn the facts he offered an order for information.

Representative G. L. Barnes opposed the order and challenged his statement relative to the Public Franchise League by saying the league's representatives approved the scheme and submitted a bill substantially the same as the one reported.

By a voice vote the House adopted the order, Mr. Barnes refusing to call for a count by a rising vote.

Put Off Till Wednesday.

The "sliding scale" bill was next in order and the House voted that consideration be postponed to next Wednesday, in order that it might have the information called for.

Representative John F. Sullivan offered an amendment to have the bill include East Boston.

MUENTER SUSPECT A CIRCUS MAN, HE SAYS

ARRESTED AS FUGITIVE HARVARD MAN, DECLARES POLICE MISTAKEN.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 11.—The man arrested here in the belief that he is Erich Muenter, the Harvard instructor wanted by the police of Cambridge for the alleged murder of his wife, declares that his name is W. F. Carr and that he was formerly a high wire performer with the Wallace circus.

The prisoner talked freely with a correspondent of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Being without money, he gave the following telegram, which he said would assure his identification and release, and it was sent to Chicago:

Mr. Ed. Weiss, 291 Fifth avenue, Chicago.

Am held as Professor Muenter, murderer. Kindly set these people right.

(Signed) W. F. C.

The gatherer said:

"I was for years a high-wire performer with Wallace's circus. A year ago I broke my leg, and have been unable to get since. I was beating my way from St. Louis to Chicago and reached Springfield yesterday. I went into a saloon in Ridgely to get a glass of beer.

"Some boys who had been lingering about the place whispered to the bartender that I was Muenter. I went into the woods north of the town, and was cooking some supper when the officers snooped down upon me.

"When I got into the county jail I asked the officers to send for W. F. Wallace, the circus man. He was in town with his circus and I knew he would identify me, but the officers would not do as I requested.

"There is no ground on which they hold me. Do I look like a professor?"

The suspect writes a good plain hand but it would not be taken for that of a scholar. He speaks in colloquial language that does not resemble that of a Harvard educator. He says he is about five feet six or seven inches. He wears a well-trimmed sandy Vandyke beard, sprinkled with gray.

GUILD VETOES FISHING BILL

The bill abolishing hunting and fishing in certain ponds in Massachusetts was vetoed by Governor Guild to-day. This is his third veto message. The places to which the bill refers are Whitehall Pond, the Washacumn lake and Lake Cochituate, all of them portions of the Metropolitan water supply.

The Governor gives as his reason for vetoing the bill that its enactment would menace public health.

NICHOLAS NOW FACES DEMAND FOR AMNESTY

President of Douma Goes to Peterhof to Present Programme to Czar.

TEN INJURED IN CLASH

ST. PETERSBURG, May 11.—Professor Mouromtseff went to Peterhof this afternoon to notify the Emperor of his election to the presidency of the lower house of Parliament. It is known that he expects to speak plainly to His Majesty on the views of the country and the Constitutional Democrats hope that much good will result from the audience. Besides demanding amnesty, Professor Mouromtseff will present in behalf of the Constitutional Democrats a majority suggestion that the Council of the Empire be made a purely consultative body, with no right to stand between the representatives of the people and the sovereign.

The new Council of the Empire, or upper house of Parliament, was opened by Count Solsky, its president, this afternoon with elaborate ceremonies.

SIMBIRSK, Russia, May 11.—A clash between the police and a crowd which was celebrating the meeting of the Douma occurred here. Afterward a gang of "Boulgans" attacked the demonstrators. Ten persons were injured in the melee.

A Te Deum was sung in the cathedral in celebration of the Douma opening yesterday, and following this the crowd formed a procession and marched toward the prison, carrying red flags and singing revolutionary songs. The police dispersed the people, and later the scattered bands were attacked by roughs. Some of the wounded are in a serious condition.

HOUSE RAPS SHOE TRUST

The House to-day rapped the United Shoe Machinery Company of Massachusetts in the most emphatic way it could without debate a bill designed to prohibit certain alleged operations of the company, which in several legislative committee meetings in this connection has been denounced as a trust and its methods severely criticised.

The bill provides that in the sale or lease of machinery in this State, there shall be no condition prohibiting the customer from buying similar patented machinery during the period covering up the transaction. The bill also forbids unlawful unreasonable discounts in selling or leasing machinery in competition with rival companies.

FUNERALS HELD UP BY STRIKE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 11.—By the strike of 1,500 coach and hearse drivers of Local Union No. 643 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to-day, consternation struck 120 households throughout the borough of Manhattan when mourners were told that the funerals planned could not take place. In many cases the friends and relatives of men, women and children, whose bodies had been prepared for burial, had arrived at the undertakers of the bereaved ones. But the last rites for the dead were suddenly halted. The undertakers could not go on with the arrangements.

The union presented its demands to the undertakers and each company and practically every one of its 1,500 members refused to go to work to-day until some adjudication of the dispute was reached.

HARVARD CARETAKER DIES.

Nathan Littlefield, for years caretaker at Harvard College, died last night at the Cambridge Hospital from a complication of diseases. Two weeks ago Mr. Littlefield celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding.

WOMEN LISTEN; ALDERMEN TALK

Every Somerville woman who has a relative in politics is to-day talking of the meeting of the Somerville Board of Aldermen last night when for an hour and a half they gave undivided attention to a woman and seemed to be even more interested than if in attendance at a pink tea or a sewing circle. William P. Rendick's presence was conspicuous because his wife was not with him. There was a very good reason for this. Mr. Rendick is a bachelor. Joseph P. Phillips over came this difficulty by taking his charming sister, Mr. Rendick his sister.

A pleasant social evening was spent after the business meeting. Mrs. Grimmons, wife of Mayor Charles A. Grimmons, originated the idea of ladies' night among the aldermen.

119TH PARADE FOR FUSILIERS

The Fusiliers Veterans' Association of Boston is to-day celebrating the 119th anniversary of its organization. The association is entertaining the Providence Light Infantry as guests of honor, 150 strong and a band of forty pieces.

At 4 o'clock the Fusiliers, headed by a band, marched from their headquarters, No. 1,151 Washington street, to the South Station, where they met the Providence men. The Light Infantry was escorted to the headquarters of the Fusiliers, where Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., made an address.

After the parade was reviewed by the Governor and the Mayor, a banquet was enjoyed at Faneuil Hall at 8 o'clock.

VERMONT MAN GIVES MR. HEARST PRAISE.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 11.—Colonel Stephen Joseyln, who was chief of staff under General Greely, and who was main ly responsible for much relief work in San Francisco, arrived here yesterday, and will remain in Vermont until May 31, when he will start on a tour of Europe.

All through the great work the orders came from the mouth of Colonel Joseyln in Vermonter. Colonel Joseyln spoke highly of the relief work of Mr. Francisco, especially of the work done by William Randolph Hearst.

Low Rent--Low Prices--at Moller's

This "low rent-low price" argument, you are inclined to doubt. Well, it's no wonder. It's been abused by small, out-of-the-way stores, who are forever crying "low rent-low prices." Stores that shut small because they don't use the advantage that low rent really gives them.

Those rents didn't stay small. It made low prices, also low rent allowed that. And it grew. Now we occupy seven and 1/2 acres of floor space—and how it's a Boston-size store with a Cambridge-size rent and small-size prices.

YACHT SPRINGS A LEAK; SAVED

Special to the Boston American.

CHATHAM, May 11.—Signals of distress from the yacht "Pastime" of Boston, bound for New York, which had sprung a leak off Chatham, brought Captain H. Eldredge and crew of the Chatham Life Saving Station to the vessel's aid late last night, and after eight hours of work the boat was early to keep freed of water.

The "Pastime" is owned by Charles O. Peters of Somerville, and Captain James F. Coney and one sailor, James M. Morse, were on board.

WON'T RESTORE CADET DECATUR

WASHINGTON, May 11.—It is announced that the President will not interfere in the case of Stephen Decatur, recently dismissed from the naval academy for hazing. Young Decatur is a descendant of Admiral Decatur, who fought in the War of 1812, and was the hero of Tripoli. The young man was the sixth of that name to enter the naval academy. Considerable influence has been brought to bear on the President for leniency on behalf of the dismissed midshipman, but the President, it is understood, feels that his punishment was merited.

ALLAN LINER 3 DAYS LATE

The Allan liner Corean arrived to-day from Glasgow and Londonderry, three days late. She brought 75 passengers in the second cabin and 323 in the third.

The trip was a series of mishaps. On May 4 her engines broke down and she was disabled for six hours. On Sunday, off the Grand Banks, she ran into an extensive ice field and narrowly escaped collision with an enormous berg. After extricating herself from the ice, the Corean ran into a fog bank and ploughed slowly through the fog for four days. She arrived to-day with all hands completely worn out.

BAILEY DENOUNCES RATE BILL COMPROMISE

TEXAN'S ANTI-INJUNCTION AMENDMENT DEFEATED IN SENATE BY VOTE OF 23 TO 54.

Washington, May 11.

In the hope of reaching a final vote on the "judicial review" feature of the rate bill before adjournment, the Senate met an hour earlier to-day. This question, as to whether or not inferior courts shall have unlimited jurisdiction in reviewing rates fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission has been the main fighting point ever since the bill came from the House.

The first and second amendments, one striking out the words "fairly remunerative" from the description of the rates, and the other providing that orders of the commission shall go into effect within a "reasonable time" instead of within thirty days, and continue in force not more than two years, were adopted.

Senator Bailey's amendment to prohibit entirely the issuance of preliminary injunctions to suspend the operation of orders of the commission was defeated.

The anti-pass amendment, recently adopted, was also discussed. Senator Spooner characterized it as an injustice, saying it would prevent the wife or family of an injured employe from being taken to his side. Senator Clapp asked that the amendment be reconsidered by unanimous consent, but an objection was made.

In speaking in favor of his amendment prohibiting inferior courts from suspending the commission's rate by an interlocutory decree, Senator Bailey said that the President had repeatedly spoken against the possibility of such decrees. He charged the Presidency with compromising with the opponents of rate legislation and called the present bill "imperfect and insufficient." His amendment was lost by a vote of forty-five to twenty-three.

FIRE HEROINE, SINGLE HANDED, SAVES BUILDING

Girl Employe of G. W. Bond & Co. Puts Out Flames in Blinding Smoke.

To the heroism of Kitty Farrell, a girl employe, is due the saving of the four-story building of G. W. Bent & Co., mattress manufacturers at No. 93 Causeway street, at 10:45 a. m. to-day, from what threatened to be a disastrous fire, which was discovered on its fourth floor. The roof of the building was slightly damaged, and goods valued at over $100 destroyed, but the prompt work of Miss Farrell, who, armed with a patent fire extinguisher, fought the flames, and the fire practicably under control before the men in the building and the fire department could give aid.

Miss Farrell was the only person on the fourth floor, and at the first cry of fire she seized a patent extinguisher. For three minutes she fought the fire alone, stamping the flames with her feet and throwing the extinguisher fluid ahead of her. The floor was filled with smoke and the girl could scarcely see when aid arrived.

G. W. Bent, manager of the company said after the fire:

"It was undoubtedly largely due to Miss Farrell's pluck and quick wit that we escaped a bad fire."

JAIL FOR FIRING AT POLICEMAN

Chin Fu, a Chinese laundryman, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the House of Correction for trying to shoot Reserve Officer Patrick J. O'Neil of East Boston but appealed from the decision of the East Boston District Court. He was held in $500 bonds for the Superior Court.

Chin pleaded not guilty, although the bullet which O'Neil fired was found imbedded in the wall of his laundry. The Chinaman refused to let officer O'Neil enter his laundry. O'Neil attempted to force his way in, and Chin Fu pulled a gun and fired. O'Neil beat a retreat to the station, secured reinforcements and gathered in the Chinaman.

HARVARD MAN SUICIDE; FAILED TO MAKE TEAM

Malcolm McLeod, Sophomore, Took His Life When His Ambition Was Foiled.

Bitter sorrow because ill-health interfered with his pet ambition to play on the varsity football eleven is thought to have been the principal reason for the suicide of Malcolm McLeod, the Harvard Sophomore who killed himself at his home, No. 251 Newbury street, Tuesday, by shooting himself through the breast, the news of whose suicide became public to-day.

McLeod tried for the varsity team last Fall and showed up in splendid form. He did not succeed in making the eleven, but he was spoken of as a likely candidate for the team this season. This Spring, when candidates were called out, McLeod declined to try, saying he did not feel well.

This inability to carry out his football ambition worried McLeod. His mental condition was aggravated of late by hard study and the combined distress seemed to have made him desperate.

He went home Tuesday from college. His mother, with whom he lived on Newbury street, did not hear any unusual complaint from him and had no reason to suspect his real condition. He was about the house as usual. At noon he went up to his room and shot himself, dying toward night in spite of medical efforts.

McLeod was twenty-two years old. He studied in the public schools, then prepared for college at Noble & Greenough's private school. He entered Tech with the class of 1907, but left there for Harvard last year. In Tech he was in the engineering courses, played on his class football eleven, and was one of the business managers of "Tech," the collegiate publication.

An Idyll of Spring

By H. B. H.

THE languor of Spring
Is a treacherous thing,
For it causes your spirits
to sink;

Though drowsy the air
You needn't despair,
For there's always Pfaff's Lager to drink.

Since days of romance
There's been an advance,
And Science has banished
our fear;

We're no more afraid
Of the beer monger's wiles
Since Science discovered
Pfaff's Beer.

The dames of the past
Would be quite aghast,
Our diet they'd dub
very queer;

And folks who thought gin
A terrible sin
Would relish a glass of
Pfaff's Beer.

So, if you want vim
Just fill to the brim
While ices and glasses
do chink;

A pure beer on tap
Is the secret of snap,
That's why to Pfaff's Lager
we drink.

SENSATION IN THEATRE AS SEERESS REVEALS SECRETS

Eva Fay Startles Audience When She Confirms Woman's Suspicion of Husband.

Dramatic Scene as Eva Fay Accuses Woman's Husband

Your suspicions regarding your husband are correct.—Eva Fay.

"Yes, yes! That is right! Oh, dear!" the woman moaned, and half ran, half stumbled out of the theatre, crying as she ran.

MRS. EVA FAY.

Seeress whose marvellous reading of the secret thoughts of women in the audience at the Globe Theatre yesterday created profound sensation.

By EleanorAmes.

EVA FAY sent an unhappy wife shrieking hysterically from the Globe Theatre yesterday afternoon, when by her mysterious Thaumaturgy she confirmed the woman's worst suspicions regarding her husband.

Hundreds of women got frightened and spellbound, scarcely daring to think, while the sobbing, moaning woman staggered up the aisle and reached the dressing room, where she collapsed utterly.

Mrs. Fay answered question after question which had been written and signed by persons in the audience. She did not see the papers; she did not need to. She went even further, and read the thoughts that were not written, but which she declared she knew were in the minds of some of her audience.

The unhappy wife had written on a slip of paper a question about her husband and signed it with her married name.

She was an attractive woman, tall and slender and stylishly gowned.

Mrs. Fay called her name, in tones which rang with reverberating distinctness through the strange Indian designs of the silk drapery.

"Your Suspicions Are Correct."

"Your suspicions regarding your husband are correct," she said.

The woman drew a sharp breath of pain.

"You should bring suit against him at once. At this moment he is in Leon. If you were to go there now you would find him in the company of a woman whose first name is Elizabeth."

"Yes, yes! That is right! Oh, dear!" the woman moaned, as she rose and half ran, half stumbled out of the theatre, crying as she went.

Mrs. Fay did not wait for her audience to recover, but went on calling names and answering questions with lightning rapidity.

The first part of the programme of cabinet work and table lifting was scarcely interesting. Mr. Fay kept it from being tiresome by his chatter. He is a ready and bright talker and tremendously active as he skips up and down, on and off the stage, and about the audience.

When he and the sisters passed around pads of paper and pencils, that people might write questions, I refused to accept the chance.

"No, He Will Not."

"Same old scheme," I murmured. "What's the use?"

But later, when the Fays were out of sight and a vaudeville performance was being given, I tore off a corner of my own copy paper and wrote on it this question, "Will Tucker be executed?

"ELEANOR AMES."

Then I folded it in a tiny ball and tucked it down in the bottom of my bag.

Mrs. Fay startled me when she called my name.

"Eleanor Ames," she said, "this is a strange question which you ask me, but it is a question near to your heart.

"You take me to a prison.

"There is a young man there.

"Will Tucker be executed? That is your question.

"No, he will not. I see only a ray of sunshine in his cell.

"He did not do that murder. That woman did not die by the hand of any man."

The simplicity of the Thaumaturgy part of the programme recommends it.

The stage is set with a heavy armchair in the middle, flanked on each side by Sphinx-like standards, holding censors with burning incense.

Mr. Fay leads his wife on to the stage. She wears a long, clinging, white robe, glittering with jewelled Arabesques.

She seats herself in the chair. Her husband ties a black silk handkerchief over her eyes. Then he puts the great diken quilt over her head and tucks it around her in the chair.

Her right hand gestures as she points out the people. On it she wears two large emerald rings and a long jewelled bracelet, which coils about her wrist in scintillating rings and ends in a serpent's head of beaten gold, which covers the back of her hand.

There were many prominent women present.

She told Mrs. Josephine Ruffin, the well known club woman, that 1909 would be a year of very great success for her.

Mrs. Ruffin had written the question with her own pencil on the back of an envelope.

DR. MAYNARD VS. CROMPTON.

Another interesting match was played in the Class C amateur billiard tournament at the Hub Billiard Palace, only seven points separating Batchelder and Crompton, the score being 150 to 143 in favor of the former. Dr. Maynard and Crompton will be the opposing players this evening.

WORLD'S RICHEST GIRL, BERTHA KRUPP, ENGAGED

Fiance's Name a Secret Until Announced at Betrothal Fete by Kaiser.

BERLIN, May 11.—Bertha Krupp, the wealthiest woman in the world, whose annual income is $5,000,000, is engaged to be married. The name of the lucky man who has won her affections is being kept a strict secret, however. One report is that her fiance is a royal prince, while another story has it that the favored suitor is a poor physician who met her.

The Kaiser, who takes a great interest in Miss Krupp's career, is shortly to visit the huge residence at Essen, and the betrothal will be celebrated in his presence with a ceremony according to the German customs. The name of the chosen husband of the heiress will be kept a secret until that time.

BERTHA KRUPP.

Girl whose income is $5,000,000 a year, whose engagement has just been announced.

FOUGERE A SHOPLIFTER.

LONDON, May 11.—Mme. Fougere, the famous Parisian dancer, who has made and spent several fortunes on the stage, was convicted at the Clerkenwell sessions to-day, together with her husband, Albert Gilrod, a French actor, of shoplifting in London drapery stores. Sentence was deferred.

POLICE ANGEL PLEADS GUILTY, PAYS HER FINE

Brockton Woman Who Declared She Would Fight Police Changes Her Mind.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, May 11.—A sensation was sprung here to-day when Mrs. Malmyra M. Alden, who was recently raided by the police, and declared it was the result of spite on their part, appeared in court and pleaded guilty to breaking the liquor law and otherwise acting illegally at her home, No. 282 North Main street.

Fined $50 on the first charge and action held in abeyance in the second, Mrs. Alden promptly paid the money, as did Mrs. Frances Chamberlain, who lives with her, and against whom the same charges were made and the same disposition followed.

Prominent Men Shielded?

It is the general belief in this city that back of the unexpected action of the woman in court lies a story of a more sensational nature. It is hinted that two prominent Brockton men were shielded by Mrs. Alden's refusal to make a fight, and the promptness with which the $100 was produced to pay the fines of the two prisoners is argued in support of this supposition.

Mrs. Alden, as a missionary among arrested young women, has been prominent in this city for several years. She was the cause of the recent shake-up in the police force as a result of which Police Inspector Chester E. Harris and Reserve Officer Frank E. Wall were dismissed. She at the same time made charges against Marshal William A. Dwyer. The whole thing was the cause of much public investigation by Mayor Keith.

After paying her fine and leaving the court to-day Mrs. Alden said to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I went to court to-day with the firm intention of fighting the charges that had been made against me. My lawyer said he had talked the matter over with others, and he thought the best thing to do for everybody all around was to plead guilty and pay whatever fine was imposed.

Thinks It for the Best.

"My lawyer told me that the money would be forthcoming. I did not say anything, but allowed him to have his way. For all around reasons it is probably the best thing, although I was not guilty of the charges. But may be it was best, after all."

The explanation of Mrs. Alden is fully as mysterious as her action in court. She would not make it any plainer. As to how the money was "forthcoming" she refused to say.

CLARK SCORED IN SENATE FOR DICTATORSHIP

Lighting Committee Chairman Denounced for Ignoring the Rights of Members.

Senator Chester W. Clark of Middlesex, chairman of the Public Lighting Committee, was attacked in the senate to-day by Senator Thomas E. Cassidy of Berkshire, a member of the committee, who declared that the chairman was running things with a high hand, paying little or no attention to the wishes of his fellow members.

The trouble began over the general bill to allow gas companies to increase their capital stock, and the investigation of the Gas Commissioners. The present limit is $1,000,000. When the bill came up from the House Senator Cassidy asked what reason there was for increase.

Senator Clark replied that the Lawrence Gas Company had asked for an increase of $400,000 under a special bill and that he thought a general bill would be better than a special one. The Lawrence Gas Company's bill is now on the table.

Senator Cassidy asked President Dunn if his dissent was noted on the general bill, and was told that it was not.

Then I wish to file my dissent written on that bill, said Senator Cassidy.

When this general bill was first considered by the committee on Public Lighting, it was given leave to withdraw, voted in favor of that action. I was against the bill. When the Lawrence Company petitioned for a larger capitalization the members of the committee, said Lawrence, and found that the company really needed a larger capital. I am still in favor of the company was reported.

The chairman of the Public Lighting committee tried to call me down on the floor as a club to beat into the Senate a general bill. I believe in gas legislation, special bills are often better for the people interested than general bills. This is a case in point.

To the chairman of this committee it seems to make no difference what my desires may be on any bill. I object to him that I must be recorded as dissenting from the general bill when he had reconstituted to the committee, but because I was not present in the floor upon my rights, he neglected to record my dissent. I do not think that it is fair treatment. I do not think the general bill is wise legislation.

I object to the chairman's actions on the sliding scale bill. He had the committee consider the bill for a report during an executive session when I was attending to my duties in the Senate and could not be present.

Senator Cassidy then moved that further consideration of the general bill go over until Tuesday, and the motion was carried.

CHAPTER XXVII.

New Revelations

THE dance took the girl's hands within hers once and raised a smile back to the sad lips.

"You are so good," the girl murmured again.

"Just tell me your trouble, dearie," pitied the dancer, "and you may count on me."

"There isn't much to tell, the girl said, after a pause. "A very short time ago I was happy. I was in a place where I had not been for ten years with the dearest of teachers. I went home to my father, and the man I was to marry was coming as usual that very evening and arranged our marriage. My father and I were practically strangers, for in ten years I had only seen him a few times, and only for a few minutes.

"Didn't your sweetheart go—"

"Oh, I wish I knew," exclaimed the girl passionately. "When I reached my father's home I found that he was a miser, and had amassed a priceless treasure in his possession. I told only seven there—those who were living in motor-houses. I entered the cottage, the treasure was stolen and robbed of the diamond. A blanket was thrown over my head and the thief carried me away to their automobile. Finally I was made the guard between where and I fainted. When I recovered consciousness I was in a strange garage and a woman was with me."

The dancer pressed the girl's hand, and after a pause she went on:

"The woman said her name was Bailey, and she had found me senseless in the road. I asked her to telephone my fiance, and she offered to take it herself on the following morning. She was gone a long time and she brought back terrible news.

"What was that?"

"That my father had denounced my fiance as one of his enemies, and that a warrant had been issued for his arrest. I would not believe it, and sent her for further news."

The girl crushed aside her fast falling tears and Ballara gently urged her to tell more.

"Did she get you further news?"

"She finally brought me news from my fiance. He was in hiding in Hanover street in Boston and ordered me to go there. He sent no word of his innocence, but I never doubted that and I thought I could help him. I recalled Rosita, whom I remembered my old friend and teacher in Cambridge. I went to her house and to my horror she confirmed the news of my fiance's guilt. I did not know what to believe. I was to meet Mrs. Bailey at South station, and go from there to the Hanover street place. She brought me word that my father had gone to Hingham and would I come there. She offered to see about a train and asked for my purse to take my ticket. I gave it to her. It contained all the money I had. She came back after a time with a ticket and the information that the train went in twenty minutes, and said I should see her for she had another appointment. After she had gone I opened the purse and found only three pennies in it."

"She had robbed you," exclaimed the dancer.

"Yes, and realizing that I didn't dare to go to Hingham, penniless and not knowing what trick had been plotting for me. Now I have been here penniless and friendless for two days, as my old teachers is now at her school and I have no one else in Boston."

"Well, you will stay with me, dear," said Ballara, firmly, "unless your father—"

"No," the girl said, starting up. "I had rather die than go back to him."

"Calm yourself, dearie," said Ballara. "We will find your fiance, and if he is innocent—"

"Oh, I'm sure of that," broke in the girl. "I have been trying to reason things out, and I am sure he has enemies who are scheming against him."

Ballara sat thinking deeply, trying to find a way out of the difficulty, and the strange girl regarded her intently. For the first time she noticed a resemblance, a vague, undefined something in the dancer that reminded her of the great, red-bearded giant, Joe Morgan.

"Why," she said Ballara at last as she noted the continued stare. "Why do you look at me like that?"

"You remind me somehow of one who would help me if I only knew where to find him."

"And who is that?"

"Mr. Joe Morgan."

For a moment the dancer was silent and a strange expression crept into her face. She leaned forward eagerly.

"Joe Morgan of Australia?" she asked breathlessly.

The girl nodded.

"How in the world," demanded the dancer, "do you happen to know Joe Morgan of Ballarat?"

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

JUST A SIMPLE QUERY COST HER HUBBY NO. 2

Marriage Declared Null and Void After Friends Ask For Health of No. 1.

IT WAS SUCH A SURPRISE

"How's your husband?"

That innocent question proved to be the shoal on which the matrimonial bark of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Thorne of Lowell was hopelessly wrecked.

In the divorce session of the East Cambridge court to-day Judge Hitchcock declared the marriage of the Thornes to be null and void.

Only for the question, "How's your husband," there would have been no nullity suit, no recrimination, no tears.

In Fall River on April 6, 1901, Mr. and Mrs. Thorne were married. Her maiden name was Mary White. Everything moved smoothly and harmoniously in the Thorne household for nearly four years. One memorable morning last Summer the Thornes came to Boston. They were walking along Washington street when a woman friend of Mrs. Thorne—she was a stranger to Mr. Thorne—stopped them and greeted Mrs. Thorne enthusiastically. Then said the woman friend to Mrs. Thorne: "How's your husband?"

"Quite Well, Thank You."

"Quite well, thank you," gasped Mrs. Thorne. Then she swiftly changed the subject.

Mr. Thorne was a trifle mystified, but plausible explanations from his wife satisfied him completely.

One month later they were again in Boston, on their way to a theatre, when another woman who was a stranger to Mr. Thorne halted them on the street and said to Mrs. Thorne: "Why, how do you do? And how's your husband? Have you heard from him lately?"

Skeleton Is Bared.

"Her husband's right here," said Mr. Thorne, with emphasis and some asperity.

Then there was embarrassment all around.

Unable to keep the skeleton in the closet any longer, Mrs. Thorne confessed that in 1896 she had been married to one Harry Dickerson of Boston, who two years later had left her to fight for his country in the Philippines.

While he was doing the fighting, Mr. Thorne was doing the courting. The marriage of the Thornes was a love match, all right. But Mr. Thorne says that all love matches are not made in heaven.

IVERNIA, 36 HOURS LATE, SAFE IN PORT

Cunard Liner Arrives at East Boston Docks With 2,016 Passengers.

The Cunard liner Ivernia arrived in port today thirty-six hours late. The big liner was warped to her dock in East Boston at 6:30 o'clock. She should have docked on Wednesday afternoon. She left Liverpool May 1, and encountered head winds during her entire voyage. Dense fogs settled on her course during the last three days, compelling her to run at reduced speed.

She carried 2,016 passengers in all; 51 first cabin, 181 second cabin and 1,784 steerage passengers. Among those returning home to Boston was Dr. George Bush of Boylston street, who had been reported killed during the recent eruption of Mt. Vesuvius. The doctor said that when danger first threatened he was at Naples, but that he left in time to avoid any discomforts.

Other first cabin passengers were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Day and S. L. Day; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Oakes and Dr. Charles Ogden of Boston; Miss M. A. Tappan of Concord, and Mrs. Robert Wray Young, whose father is the present governor of Nova Scotia.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pacey, Gerrish Poles, numbered seven children when the ship left Liverpool, but during the voyage a little girl was born whose name will be Ivernia.

Isabel Smith, a pretty Scotch girl of twenty years, of Aberdeen, was met at the wharf by Alexander Stewart of No. 6 Moreland street, Roxbury, for whom she has been one year. It was a pleasant greeting and the young couple left the dock together in search for a minister to make them one for life.

The Ivernia brought 572 Irish emigrants to port, the next largest number arriving here in years, the last arrival of the ship one month ago landing over 700. In the steerage there were 227 English, 279 Norwegians, 245 Swedes, 158 Finns and many other nationalities.

WED IN WEST; SURPRISE HERE

The news was received in Boston to-day that Arthur G. Jones of No. 30 Sawyer avenue, son of Leander E. H. Jones, the wealthy builder and contractor and real estate man of Dorchester, whose place of business is at No. 6 Dorchester street, was married on Thursday afternoon to Miss Genevieve G. Hughes of Denver, Col.

The wedding was a great surprise to the friends and even to the relatives of Mr. Jones.

The groom's father, Leander E. H. Jones, to-day admitted the truth of the report, but refused to discuss the matter any further. When told that the groom had said that he was bringing his bride to Boston, the father was equally uncommunicative.

Arthur G. Jones moves in the younger social set of Dorchester. He is a member of the Dorchester Yacht Club and several other social organizations.

TOWN SAVED BY BUCKET BRIGADE

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 11.—Flames that threatened to destroy the town of Sturgeonville, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad between West Newton and Sturgeon, twenty-nine miles west of here, were checked at noon by a bucket brigade to the river.

The First National Bank building has been destroyed. It was a four-story brick and stone structure, valued at $50,000. The other buildings known to have been destroyed up until noon follow:

Large residence of S. Rodibaugh and contents, loss $10,000; residence of John Keegan, loss $5,000; Kelly Brothers, department store, loss $25,000; residence of Dr. W. S. Pearse, $5,000; drug store of J. D. Shaner, loss $8,000.

Residents of the town moved their household goods and valuables, as they had little hope of saving their homes.

Sturgeville is a mining town, with a population of about 2,500.

The total loss is $100,000.

TOO LATE?

MAMA! Don't be frightened—but be warned!

Every Mother knows, or should know, that the terrible Mortality among little children is caused by Stomach and Bowel troubles. Colic, Sour Curd, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, Measles, Rashes, Scarlet Fever—even Mumps—have their first cause in constipation.

The Delicate Tissues of a Baby's Bowels will not stand rough treatment. Salts are too violent, and Castor Oil will only grease the passages, but will not make and keep them Clean, Healthy and Strong.

There is no other medicine as safe for a child as Cascarets, the fragrant little Candy Tablet, that has saved thousands of families from unhappiness.

The Nursing Mother even in good health should always keep her own Bowels Loose and her Milk Mildly Purgative by taking a Cascaret at night before going to bed.

No other medicine has this remarkable and valuable quality. Mama takes the Cascaret, Baby gets the Benefit.

Cascarets act like strengthening Exercise on the weak little bowels of the growing babe, and make them better able to get all the Nourishment out of Baby's Natural Food.

Larger children cannot always be watched, and will eat unreasonably. The Ready Remedy should ever be at hand—Cascarets—to take care of the trouble when it comes.

No need to Force or Bribe children to take Cascarets. They are always more than ready to eat the sweet little bit of Candy.

Repulsive medicine forced on the little ones does more harm than good.

Home is not complete without the ever ready Box of Cascarets. Ten cents buys a small one at the Corner Drug Store.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet is stamped "CCC."

FREE TO OUR FRIENDS!

We want to send to our friends a beautiful French Enameled GOLD-PLATED BONBON BOX hard-enameled in colors. It is a beauty for the dressing table. Ten cents in stamps is asked as a measure of good faith and to cover cost of Cascarets with which this Sample Casket is loaded. Send to-day, mentioning this paper. HERMAN AND ATTELL MEET IN RING TONIGHT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—Abe. Attell and Kid Herman meet here in a twenty-round fight to-night. Neither fighter did any training yesterday.

Herman Landfield, otherwise known as "Kid" Herman, said to-day:

"This is the chance I have been waiting for. I think the weight and the distance favor me, and I feel that at the mixing and the infighting I am Attell's master. I am glad there is no chance for a draw decision on this fight, for I am confident that I will be returned the winner. I don't like to talk about myself; I usually let my money talk for me. I have bet $2500 on myself. Perhaps that is the strongest statement I can make.

"I intend to set a hot pace from the first round to the finish, and I want to win by the knockout route if it is in me."

Abraham Attell, featherweight champion of the world, said:

"The fact that Herman has a few pounds the best of the weight does not bother me in the least. I like to fight fellows who weigh more than I do. That is where I made good in the East. They say that I am not at home with a tough, mixing fighter. That is what they say about my St. Louis fight with Kid Broad, but I beat him in twenty rounds if there are any tougher mixers than Herrera, Tommy Feltz and Mowatt I want to see them.

"Don't tell these people that I am going to spar with Herman; I am not. I intend to do some slambanging myself. I have trained for a hard fight because I think this one will not be easily won but when it comes to the award I feel sure it will come to me. The matter of a few pounds in weight will not stop me."

On the day of the fight both boys are fit and supremely confident. Neither one of them shows the least sign of the nervousness so usual in the training camp on the last day. The training grind is all over; there is no question of weight to be made, and each man can come into the ring at the weight he likes best.

Attell did a little light work yesterday afternoon, just enough to keep his wind in good shape, and Herman skipped the rope and hammered the bags before taking his plunge.

Opinion is evenly divided. Herman having fought two fights here within six months, has a large local following. His friends point to his easy victory over Eddie Hanlon and his magnificent showing with such a hard nut as Herrera; they say that such a fighter as Herman has proven himself to be will have little trouble in cornering Attell and winning from him by adopting rushing, tearing tactics.

Attell has never fought in Los Angeles. The local fans will not appreciate this man's cleverness until they see him at work in the ring. He has one of the neatest lefts in the world, never loses his head, and knows how to take advantage of every weak spot in the other man's defence. Herman is to meet the cleverest man he has ever faced in a ring. Probably on account of the difference in the weights the betting favors Herman. Attell went to bed early last night. There will be no more weighing in, and the boys will meet for the first time in the ring to-night.

BILL PHILLIPS WON FIRST AT BELMONT PARK

RACE TRACK, Belmont Park, May 11.—"America's beauty spot," as the Duchess of Marlborough termed Belmont Park during her visit last year, attracted another large and fashionable racing assemblage this afternoon, the clubhouse lawns and the farstretching lounge in front of the main grand stand lobbing what appeared to be an immense army by the time the Larchmont Stakes was called.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, May 11.—Something a little easier was wanted than expected when the St. Louis Browns came on the field to measure diamond stakes with the Hub giants.

The Browns got into town after a successful tour and figured on continuing their winning gait at this extreme end of the circuit.

It was chilly conditions for real live playing, but the home team, thoroughly warmed over the bumps applied by the Athletics, were up for a furious scamper, and threatened to give the Browns a whipping if they could get started the right way.

The occasion had especial interest as it was scheduled to be the awakening of the real Grimshaw, which has been dormant ever since the team began the season.

The fans believed that the beans had arrived, and some good old camouflaging was about to begin by routing the Brownies.

Jimmy McAleer had a bunch of new material moving around the field and he has picked up some good ones from different sections of the map.

He had Hartzell holding off at the bat. He was not quite in the same class as Hoppe, the blonde slugger of the Athletics, now, but he was a close second. He batted from Beaver Charley Hemphill, who came next, was remembered as the old Red Sox player, who has since gone from bad into major ball.

Stone, the batting demon, came third, as he was reckoned on to send those in front of him around the bases with hefty clouts.

O'Brien, the second sacker, was new to the observers. He came from St. Paul.

The infield was Smith, a youngster, who was due up from Dayton, and has shown some good work.

Bill Dineen got moving to do the box sketch, and it was up to William to show the hosiers.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Hartzell went out on strikes. Collins tossed out Hemphill. A grand stop by Parent shut Stone off. NO RUNS.

Wallace flied to the flag pole. Parent rounded out. O'Brien to Jones. Smith struck out. Selbach down on a line to Jones. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Wallace went out, Collins to Grimshaw. O'Brien walked. Jones popped to centre field. Selbach fumbled the ball, allowing O'Brien to reach second. Bird to Freeman. Jones was out stealing, Graham to Rickey. ONE RUN.

Smith got in front of Freeman's hit and tossed it to Bird before he reached first base. Criss lifted a high one to O'Brien back of second. Hartzell threw out Perry. NO RUNS.

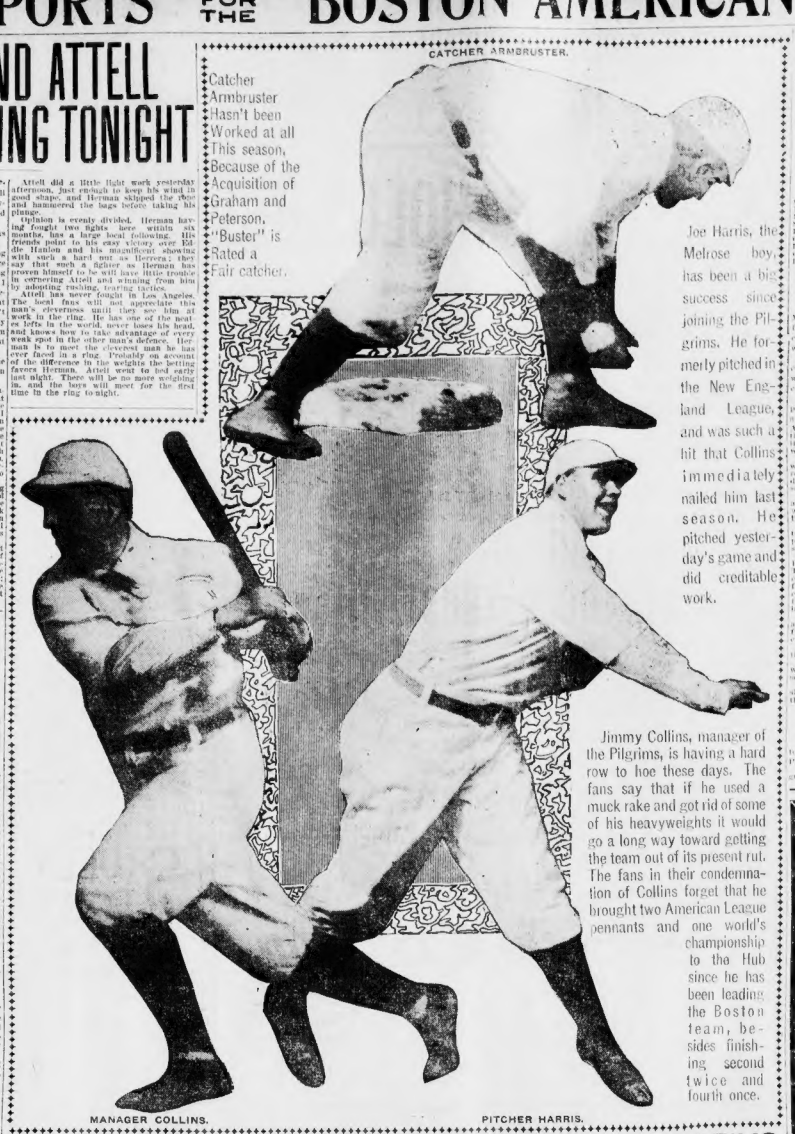
HOPPE TO PLAY JAKE SCHAEFFER

CHICAGO, May 10.—George Sisson, winner of the world's championship in the recent tournament in New York, last night, in a game with George Sutton of Canada in the professional billiard tournament, made the high run thus far for the tournament, 112, and beat the game, making only 423 billiards, while Sutton ran 300 points.

Sutton and Cure will meet this afternoon and Hoppe and Schaefer to-night.

MALONEY GETS EIGHT YEARS.

ROCKLAND, Me., May 11.—Judge Peabody yesterday sentenced John Maloney, convicted of manslaughter, to eight years in the State Prison at Thomaston.



CATCHER ARMBRUSTER.

Catcher Armbruster Hasn't been Worked at all This season, Because of the Acquisition of Graham and Peterson, "Buster" is Rated a Fair catcher.

Joe Harris, the Melrose boy, has been a big success since joining the Pilgrims. He formerly pitched in the New England League, and was such a hit that Collins immediately nailed him last season. He pitched yesterday's game and did creditable work.

Jimmy Collins, manager of the Pilgrims, is having a hard row to hoe these days. The fans say that if he used a muck rake and got rid of some of his heavyweights it would go a long way toward getting the team out of its present rut. The fans in their condemnation of Collins forget that he brought two American League pennants and one world's championship to the Hub since he has been leading the Boston team, besides finishing second twice and fourth once.

PREVIOUS AUTO CARNIVALS PROMISE TO BE OUTDONE JULY NEXT BY

BRETTON WOODS CONTESTS

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The week of motoring in the Bretton Woods, to be held early in June next, promises to outdo all previous motor contests in that locality. True, it will be lacking in the dangerous climb to the clouds, in which, in order to attain a speed previously unknown, motorists will take their lives in their hands. Even without this feature, there will be sufficient of importance and interest to keep all in good humor.

Mr. J. Anderson, than whom no man has worked harder to advance the interests of motoring, and who is really the mainstay of the White Mountain and other mound tournaments, talked over the matter in a general way yesterday. He has just returned from Ormond and is now bound at Crawford on the Mt. Washington. Certain modifications will be formulated to rules and conditions will be formulated to Bretton Woods. Mr. Anderson is much pleased with the present condition of affairs as regards the coming carnival week, which he believes will be one of the big events of the year.

The idea is to have measure tours run from New York and Boston to Bretton Woods, where it is hoped the Glidden tourists will likewise find the completion of their trip. From runs, which might be termed reliability contests, will be held to the majority of the interesting points in the Presidential and Franconia ranges. The ascent of Crawford Notch will probably be established for the 1906 to be the finish of the start of the climb being made at the starting through and the finish being either Oxford ..... 107 Watertank 88

LYNN, May 11.—Cold weather was responsible for many empty spaces on the bleachers this afternoon at Ocean Park. Manager Lake was confined to the bench by a bad cold. Vail was again in the box for the home team. WILL HAVE NO FIGHT PICTURES

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—There will be no moving pictures of the Nelson-Herrera fight. This is positive. All negotiations were called off yesterday morning and a telegram was sent to Miles Brothers advising them to ship their machinery on from New York. After a four-day wrangle which nearly drove McCarey crazy, the club manager made a flat proposition, which was not accepted by Nolan. Nolan wanted a bigger cut than Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club felt justified in offering, and Nelson's manager would not agree to give Herrera any part of the picture proceeds.

If You Lack Tact Win Your Way by Being Always Kind

By Beatrice Fairfax

"WHAT is tact?" asks a reader, and wherein does it differ from policy?"

The dictionary definition of tact is "nice discernment" and "worldly wisdom."

The polite person has always an end to gain and makes herself agreeable as a means to gain it.

The tactful person dislikes to see those about her unhappy or ill at ease, and exerts herself to the utmost to prevent their being so.

She has the gift of intuition and knows what to say and what to leave unsaid.

Tact is inborn, policy is cultivated.

The tactful woman never forces a situation. She does the right thing at the right time.

If she is a married woman she does not choose the hour before dinner when her husband is tired and a little cross to ask a favor.

She reads his mood and adapts herself to it.

She knows enough not to know too much.

She knows when demonstrations are welcome and when they are not.

There is a negative kind of tact which consists of never doing the wrong thing, but perfect tact is both negative and positive—in other words, never doing the wrong thing and always doing the right.

Tact is an invaluable quality in a woman. It endears her to both sexes and makes her a most comfortable, companionable person to live with.

It is an almost impossible thing to cultivate, but kindness of heart is the next-door neighbor, and that can be cultivated.

If you make it your aim to try not to hurt people's feelings you cannot go very far wrong.

It requires self-control, unselfishness and thoughtfulness, but you will be well repaid by the love and popularity you will gain.

Before you speak think whether what you are about to say will please or displease the person to whom you are speaking.

Try and remember the nice things you hear about your friends and forget the disagreeable ones.

Tact and kindness will carry you much more successfully through life than a pretty face or a witty tongue.

If you are not gifted with tact do not despair, but win your way by kind words and deeds.

Don't be politic—people see through that kind of a person very quickly and are antagonized by the knowledge that they are being made use of.

SMART STREET COSTUME WITH NOBBY RUSSIAN BLOUSE COAT

One of the Popular Styles in Light Weight Coats

THERE is no lack of variety in the style or cut of the coats to be worn this Summer. The short Eton, the Louis XV., the Russian and the Russian blouse coat are equal in their popularity.

This model shows the latest design in the Russian blouse coat. The material is a striped canvas cloth in a light buff color.

The upper part of the coat is laid in deep box pleats, which extend below the waist, and are held in tightly by a wide belt of ladies' cloth in the same shade, with large cloth-covered buttons.

The skirt is pleated and very full, with a wide band of ladies' cloth at the foot.

The hat is trimmed with beautifully shaded ospreys and ribbon of the shade of the dress, the brim formed of tuscan straw.

It is one of the smartest costumes designed for the early Summer.

Sidney Warwick's Great Story of Present-Day American Life,

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"You are very kind, I am sure," Grantham said.

"Not at all, not at all!" Only too happy, Mr. Herries—Delamere took up his hat. Then he paused, with the air of a man struck by a sudden recollection. "Or, by the way, a most singular thing. You'll hardly credit it, Mr. Herries, but I—I seem to have left home without any change. Most singular! Shocking memory I have. Fact is, I didn't discover it till I was getting my ticket. Devilish awkward fix it lands a man in, as I am sure you will appreciate. Really don't know what I shall do."

His brows were knitted as if in deep reflection; then, with an ingenious smile, he turned to Grantham.

"I really feel ashamed to make such a request, Mr. Herries, as our acquaintance has been so short, but under the circumstances if you could lend me five dollars only until I reach home?"

* * * * * * *

"One can readily understand Herries's lack of eagerness to renew his acquaintanceship with the gentleman," thought Grantham, with a smile, as he went upstairs to dress for dinner, after his visitor had departed with effusive thanks and a certain greediness—"but it's too bad of him to pass his impecunious acquaintances on to me! Strikes me, Herries ought to pay up that five-spot—for Mr. Delamere never paid back a loan in his life, I'll swear, and isn't likely to begin with me!"

Grantham's face grew a shade more thoughtful, as he added:

"Wonder if Jack ever made an ass of himself during those years when his friends lost sight of him, and whether this man holds the key to it? However, that's no business of mine." And Grantham went on shaving.

A Coincidence

Meanwhile, Mr. Delamere was walking through the town in the direction of the railway station, reflecting ruefully on his disappointment.

However, his journey had not been altogether fruitless. With $5 in his possession, Freddy's thought turned as by some mechanical process to a drink. He walked into the bar of the nearest hotel, pausing on the threshold to glance at two men passing, the face of one of whom seemed familiar.

"Nothing exciting going on in town, I suppose?" inquired Freddy, as he ordered a drink and "a big cigar."

"What makes you think there should be?" asked the bartender, proceeding to count out the change.

"Nothing; only I met a couple of men just now, and one of 'em I know for a fact to be a Mulberry street detective. Know what they're doing down here? Not out on pleasure, I know."

"Well, they do say that they're looking here about for that private detective mixed in that train accident, but I don't know what truth there's in it," said the man indifferently.

"What, the woman accused of the murder of the dancer? Cried Freddy. "Not Olga Valz?"

"That's it," nodded the bartender, who was a man of few words.

"What a curious thing! Why, only ten minutes ago I was discussing that very affair," cried Freddy, leaning over the counter and tapping the astute man impressively. "Why, it was I who discovered the crime!"

"Fancy!" said the man politely, not half so much impressed by this announcement as Freddy thought he should have been, and drawing a watch from the pocket of his customer's hand had removed nearly to his watch and chain that he quite cared for.

A Ball Fan

"Fact I assure you." You must have seen my name in the papers at the time, Delamere—Mr. Delamere—is well-known name in the theatrical world," said Freddy impressively.

"Maybe I did; I forget," said the man with an irritating indifference of manner that piqued Freddy, who needed little encouragement to recount his story in detail, but was disappointed at the apparent manifest lack of interest. "So it was you discovered the crime! Did you really, now? Fancy! I haven't got no memory for these things; they come and they go. I just set 'em in the paper and they pass out of my mind like. Now, supposin' it was something about baseball, now"—and for the first time a gleam of something approaching intelligent interest appeared in his stolid, wooden countenance—"I should not have forgot it if it had been anything about baseball, I'll be bound."

Freddy drank off his highball and turned to go; his self-esteem was a trifle ruffled by this coldness after what he considered to be important a person as himself.

"Shouldn't care, myself, to be passed to say scathingly. "Now, for my part, if it had been baseball, I shouldn't have wasted no time by even reading it!"

As he delivered himself of this crushing rejoinder, Freddy Delamere became aware that the man was staring at him as curiously as a collector gazes at some unique specimen of insect life under a microscope.

"Well," the man said, after a deep breath, evidently quite unaware that the steam-roller of sarcasm had passed over him, "I've heard some queer things in my time, but that beats all! Don't waste no time over baseball news? Well, fancy that now!" So far as his stolid face could be said to wear an expression, it reflected a look of tolerant pity. He seemed genuinely sorry for Delamere.

Cross Purposes

All Freddy's vanity rebelled against being pitied by a man whom he mentally termed a "cuke"; it was insufferable. He felt he owed it to himself to impress a proper sense of the importance upon this rustic intelligence. He ordered another drink, as he said airily:

"Oh, I play baseball, but don't read about it; probably you read about it too never play it, eh?" He saw the man open his mouth to make an indignant protest, but he hurried on. "Oh, there are lots of others like you. I don't think any the worse of you for that. I—I have thought seriously of buying a little place here, another. I'm rather keeping my eyes open in case anything suitable comes into the market. A very convenient distance from town, as John Herries has been assuring me."

"You've been up on business, then?" the bartender inquired, and, as if unconsciously, he glanced up and down his customer as if wondering what the nature of the business could be, exasperating Freddy to a degree.

"Business, my good fellow?" he said sharply. "You have curious manners in this part of the world, to say a gentleman cannot go—er—on a friendly visit to Mr. Herries of Herries without the assumption that he is a tradesman and his business inquired!" Mr. Delamere's attitude was distinctly reminiscent of the days when he played juvenile lead to the "guv'nor." "Let me tell you, John and I know each other well—I might say, we are quite old friends."

The man seemed quite unimpressed. Perhaps he was not without a vein of native shrewdness in spite of his stolid expression, and was reflecting that Herries's friends were not in the habit of dropping in at his bar to discuss their private affairs.

Danger Ahead

"Old friends, are you? Fancy that now!" he remarked, with bovine placidity. Then he added: "Mr. Herries, he's my landlord, and a good sort, sure enough."

"If you're a friend of his you'll know Mr. Grantham."

Freddy could not be quite sure whether there was a veiled sneer in the man's tones.

"I have never met Mr. Grantham, though I have heard John speak of him many times," said Delamere slowly, by way of terminating the interview. It was useless to feel, to waste any more words.

"He's the real goods, he is!" cried the publican, with enthusiasm, as Delamere frowningly drained his glass. "Have a minute before you go! What do you think of this?"

He retired hurriedly into an inner apartment, and reappeared with a photograph in a cheap frame, which he dusted with his sleeve almost reverently.

"Mr. Grantham, he gave me this portrait himself, knowing what a sportsman I was. I value that portrait, I can tell you! That's Mr. Grantham—good sport and gentleman. I tell him."

And with face suffused with pride he handed the photograph across the counter to Freddy Delamere.

Freddy glared at the photograph, then across at the publican, and he smiled knowingly to himself. So this rustic actually doubted whether he knew Herries at all, and had been impudent enough to test the fact for a joke. This Mr. Grantham! This was the portrait of the man whom he had just left after their interview in the library at Herries Court!

There's a Bright Side to Life, If You Only See It

IT is a curious and weird phase of human nature to seek persecution, but it is extremely common. Men suffer from the disease, but not to such a pronounced degree as do women.

"Hello, Brown," says Jones. "Haven't seen you for a long time! How are things going with you?"

"Badly," says Brown in mournful accents. "Nothing doing in business. Times hard. And the wife's laid up again. Rheumatism bad luck lately."

As a matter of fact, Brown was in a fairly cheerful mood until he met Jones, but the sympathy from a single for a bit of sympathy from a friend he had not seen for some months was too much for him. So he fell into the temptation to represent himself as a martyr, which is at the root of eighty per cent. of the totally imaginary unhappiness which besets the human family.

A hundred pleasant things had happened to Brown since he and Jones met last, but he didn't mention these, or even think about them. The unlucky, unfortunate events of life are always chosen for brooding over, and not one person in a hundred of the friends and acquaintances one meets fails to unburden the load of woe of which each imagines himself to be the victim.

How often does one encounter a friend who bursts a bomb of joy at us?

Which of our friends asks us to rejoice with them, to bask in the sunshine and the warmth of good tidings and buoyant happiness?

Don't Brood Over It

"Don't grizzle," used to be the favorite expression of an old-fashioned nurse to any of her young charges who developed the depressing tendency to imagine themselves injured or to pose to their parents and small world as a martyr.

Self-pity is at the root of all this sorrowing and theatrical trouble hunting. People worry themselves over trifles, brood over fancied slights, injuries and injustices, till their imaginary wrongs make them feel like martyrs driven to the stake.

It is so easy to delude one's self into the belief that the world has used us very ill. Look in the face; my name is Might-have-been;

I am called No More, Too Late, Farewell."

These two lines of Dante Rossetti furnish a complete key to the morbid brooding of a mind over troubles. It makes little difference whether the sorrows have been or imaginary. A tiny trouble can easily be manufactured by the mind fever.

EXPERT WAYS TO PAPER WALLS

IT is Spring cleaning time, and in many houses there are probably rooms ready to be papered. There are many ways to do it, and these are the most reliable:

Take a perfectly clean broom and wet the walls all over with clean water; then with a small, sharp hoe or scraper scrape off all the old whitewash or paper possible, then with the paper of the right length, and when all ready to put on the paper wet the walls with warm water.

Another way is to make very thin paste by dissolving one pound of white glue in five quarts of warm water, and wash the walls with it before putting on the paper. A very good way is to apply the paste to both paper and wall. The paste may be made from either wheat or rye flour, but must be put on warm.

CEMENT FOR STOVES

IF the stove is cracked, a good cement is made for it as follows: Wood ashes and salt in equal proportions, reduced to a paste with cold water, and filled in the cracks when the stove is cool. It will soon harden.

They Call Moran a "Meddler" for Obeying His Oath

What Legislators Who Fear an Investigation Think of Him Need Trouble Him Little. HE Is Responsible to the PEOPLE, Who Expect Him to Keep His Promises.

A "leading member" of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, according to yesterday's papers, had this to say of the Grand Jury's investigation of the recent bribery scandals in that body: "We are conducting our own investigation. District Attorney Moran is meddling with business that belongs to the Great and General Court."

Here is a strange condition in old, "conservative" Massachusetts to attract attention, when a legislator, sufficiently wise and experienced to be called a "leader," calls a District Attorney a "meddler" FOR OBEYING HIS OATH OF OFFICE TO INVESTIGATE ALL ALLEGED CRIME IN SUFFOLK COUNTY.

Two or three legislators, after a particularly bare-faced piece of legislative chicanery, announced that attempts had been made to bribe them. An investigation by the House of Representatives was demanded. House leaders—perhaps including the "leading member" already mentioned—stifled the demand. Pressure was put on the members who had told their stories to the newspapers. One of them yielded and announced, on the floor of the House, that the interviews with him were fictitious.

It is significant, as showing the temper of certain Representatives, that they greeted the denial of this member—Swig of Taunton—with applause. Apparently the members thought, by listening to Mr. Swig's denial AND APPLAUDING IT, that they completely purged themselves in the eyes of the public of all accusations he and others had made.

They seemed to think that ended it, as it would have in past years, when district attorneys were of the old-fashioned sort.

But it happens that the people of Suffolk county elected another kind of a district attorney last fall. They elected him because they were tired of the kind of law enforcement that gets the little rascals and lets the big ones go, and because they approved of his ante-election promises. One of these promises was:

> "When I am elected I shall take cognizance of and investigate every charge of crime, whether made by police, individuals or the public press, and shall endeavor to secure evidence and convict the criminals, whether they are poor or rich, or feeble or influential, EVEN THOUGH THEY BE THE MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE THEMSELVES."

In keeping his promise to the people who elected him, District Attorney John B. Moran summoned the members of the Massachusetts Legislature before him. As to the results of his investigation no one yet knows.

Many of the Representatives professed amusement when they were summoned, although just why it should be a source of amusement that the Legislature of a State is under investigation for corruption is a matter most readers of this newspaper will fail to understand. Others professed indignation. It is safe to say that the emotion that controlled some of them was FEAR.

No wonder such legislators as have had their own sweet, irregular way on Beacon Hill call Moran a "meddler."

"I suppose," said another "leader"—or perhaps it was the same one—"that the regular cases will go over and the poor people in jail have to wait another month for trial, while Moran wastes time on this."

Well, if "poor people" suffer, whose fault is it? Four months ago District Attorney Moran notified the Legislature that his office could not do all the work he was sworn to do without additional help. He asked for legislation appointing two needed assistants. The bill is still pending. Mr. Moran has just been asked to appear before the third or fourth committee that has considered the matter.

The Legislature found no difficulty in rushing through the Touraine Hotel bill. It found no need for delay in killing the overtime bill and all legislation demanded by the labor unions. It has not hesitated in passing the sliding scale scheme, prepared by the Gas Trust and Corporation Counsel Babson. It appears to be only when they are asked to help punish the big, as well as the little criminals, that the Senators and Representatives find cause to back and fill and procrastinate.

Some legislator said if Moran didn't cease his pernicious activity the Legislature would "abolish him and his office." What a spectacle for outside States to hear Massachusetts legislators spouting about legislating the law enforcer out of office BECAUSE HE TRIES TO ENFORCE THE LAWS.

This particular threat is somewhat childish, because they would have to get an amendment to the constitution to do it, and the people of the entire State could hardly be depended upon to tolerate the ousting of a district attorney because he did his duty.

But that such a thing should be EVEN SUGGESTED at the State House is illuminative as illustrating the mental attitude of some of Massachusetts' "statesmen."

The people of this Commonwealth expect their law officers to punish crime wherever they find it, whether out of or IN the Legislature. The people of Suffolk county expect Mr. Moran to search for evidence, wherever it may be. That is what they elected him for.

The law abiding, decent, honest members of the Legislature should welcome an investigation that may help to make their body the kind of a body it is supposed to be.

What the OTHERS want doesn't count. No criminal ever entirely approved of the policeman that caught him. In his eye the officer of the law is invariably a "meddler."

Little Editorials from the People

KILL THE "SLIDING SCALE" GAS BILL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN

The fact that the Committee on Public Lighting of the Massachusetts Legislature has just reported a bill based upon the sliding scale for gas prices and dividends, so-called, is something that ought to be called to the attention of the community, so that its passage into law may be prevented, if possible. It is a distinct step backwards in the supervision of public service corporations by the Commonwealth, and the fact that the Public Lighting Committee has reported it, has no tendency to show any merit in the bill, as the committee has reported adversely upon practically all legislation that any of the gas and electric light companies have not desired at this session.

Some of the reasons why the bill is a vicious one are:

1. It takes away from the community the right of petition and leaves the gas companies without powers as to fixing the price of gas, its most important function, and places the matter of price entirely in the hands of the company. Not cost and a fair profit, but a desire to exact larger dividends, fixes the price.

2. It is the first exception to the Massachusetts practice of having supervision over public service corporations and makes the Boston Consolidated Gas Company a self-governing, automatic rate-fixing corporation, subject practically to no supervision except upon certain very remote contingencies, which are unlikely to happen.

3. The bill is a contract between the Commonwealth and the gas company for ten years, which is contrary to modern ideas of dealing with public service corporations, and gives the companies a ten-year freedom from any interference, with full power to fix the price of gas and a probable freedom from legislative restrictions which would be placed upon them by the gas commission.

4. Under the bill the price of gas will undoubtedly be eight-five cents very soon, and the company will pay 8 per cent. dividends, free from any State interference, and free from any power to have the price of gas lowered, except as the company sees fit to do it. The condition of the science of gas making or the price of materials during ten years is immaterial.

5. It is special legislation, of which there has been too much. If the plan is a good one, it is good for all the companies of the Commonwealth, and no exemption should be made in favor of any one company and no good reason has been given why it should apply to only one.

6. It will certainly have a tendency to lower the quality of the product furnished.

7. The whole scheme is simply to retard public ownership of the lighting plants, and the Public Franchise League, which has fostered the plan, is responsible for the bill in its present form and will be responsible for its passage if it is enacted. These members of the Public Franchise League were just as certain that the gas act of 1903 was a good legislation, until they saw how it would work in operation, when they were eager to undo their misdirected efforts. It will likely so be in the present case. A Legislature which would pass this act would be most subservient to the corporate idea and blind to the interests of the community. It would be acting in opposition to accepted ideas as to State supervision of public service corporations, and would be passing out special privileges to the favored.

Yours truly,
J. T. AUERBACH.

WHY THEY CHANGED THEIR MINDS ABOUT THE COACHING TRIP

The Man Who Never Bets

By James J. Montague

"I never bet on horse races."—August Belmont on the witness stand.

WHEN your clerk invests your dneats down at Mr. Belmont's track,
And discovers on the morrow that he cannot pay them back,
It is soothing to remember that, although he always gets
Most of your lamented assets, Mr. Belmont never bets.

WHEN a hungry wife and children learn that papa's weekly pay
Has been lost to Mr. Belmont on some glad Suburban day,
How it dissipates their sorrows and makes grief and care take wing
When they're told that Mr. Belmont wouldn't bet for anything!

WHEN the bookies have to divvy with the steward of the track,
Who must pass along the plunder till said Belmont gets his whack;
Joyfully they peel the banknotes to discharge their honest debt
To the straitlaced Mr. Belmont, who was never known to bet.

WHAT a help and inspiration is the life of such a man,
Who conducts his racing business on a line and sure-thing plan!
From the crooks who do his betting he collects his "ad" advance,
By which noble operation he leaves not a thing to chance!

ROGERS sometimes takes a flyer; Gates will wager now and then,
Morgan, Harriman and Perkins take a risk with other men,
But A. Belmont, who is building up a high and holy name,
Never bets; he knows it's safer to conduct a sure-thing game!

(PASTOR PEOPLE'S TEMPLE)

IF we give the Old State House to the Elevated, the next thing in order will be the enlargement of the Park street station, so as to include the old Granary burying ground. "Let us halt before we start."

Short lesson in logic: "Necessity is the mother of invention." Coal is a necessity; the trust is an invention, but we will not mention the name of the inventor. We may venture the assertion that he is in direct opposition to Divine Providence.

COURAGE

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THERE is a courage, a majestic thing,
That springs forth from the brow of Pain, full grown,
Minerva-like, and dares all dangers known,
And all the threatening future yet may bring.
Crowned with the helmet of great suffering
Serene, with that grand strength by martyrs shown,
When at the stake they die, and make no moan,
And even as the flames leap up are heard to sing.
A courage so sublime, and unafraid,
It wears its sorrows like a coat of mail;
And Fate, the archer, passes by dismayed,
Knowing his best barbed arrows needs must fall
To pierce a soul so armored and arrayed
That Death himself might look on it and quail.

Only the Clean Can Endure Publicity

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

WHO was Egenolph Emmel—when and where was he born—when and how did he die—was he rich or poor, tall or short, fat or lean?

Nobody seems to be able to answer these questions. The man's name appears but once, so far as I know, in print. The encyclopedias in all languages are silent about him. The libraries have next to nothing to offer concerning him—and yet this man, Egenolph Emmel, started the biggest business that is to-day being carried on in the world.

The Frankfurter Journal, started by Emmel in the year 1615, was the first real newspaper as distinguished from the isolated and irregular news pamphlets.

Emmel's publication advertised itself as a purveyor of the "news of the day," and was regularly hawked about the streets by "mercuries," the first of the "newsies."

In 1622 one Nathaniel Butler of London established the pioneer English newspaper, The Weekly News.

In Paris, 1631, appeared the Gazette de Paris, first of French newspapers.

To get back to England, it may be well to mention the Diurnal Occurrences, founded in 1641, the first newspaper to furnish reports of the proceedings in Parliament.

It may be interesting to note that, less than a hundred years later—1738—a member of parliament delivered himself as follows:

"The people of Great Britain are governed by a power that never was heard of as a supreme authority in any age or country before. It is the government of the Press. The stuff which our weekly newspapers are filled with is received with greater reverence than Acts of Parliament, and the sentiments of one of these scribblers have more weight with the multitude than the opinions of the best politicians in the kingdom."

The "editorial" finds its origin in the writings of Defoe, Swift and Addison and their literary contemporaries. Taking their cue from the essayists and pamphleteers, the newspaper men began writing on the issues which should reflect the paper's opinion of passing events and its approval or disapproval of the men and measures chronicled in its columns.

In 1788 a French journalist said to his fellow craftsmen:

"Suffer yourselves to be blamed, condemned, imprisoned; suffer yourselves even to be hanged; but publish your opinions. It is not a right; it is a duty."

Despite many failures and shortcomings—which it has in common with all other human and earthly things—the Press has, in the main, followed the Frenchman's noble advice. Fearlessly it has published the facts, the bad along with the good, the dishonorable along with the honorable, and so kept men's minds in living touch with what is going on in the world about them.

Scoundrelism and meanness the Press has surrounded with the limelight of publicity, oftimes killing it by the very intensity of exposure.

From his sanctum, the editor—his heart as a general thing being with the right cause—calls the people's attention to the cause that is wrong, thunders against it, masses against it the indignation of the community, and keeps pounding and excoriating it until the right wins and justice is vindicated.

Such is the power of the Press—the greatest that there is on earth to-day—the maker and unmaker of Presidents and Kings, the upbuilder and overturner of platforms and parties, as there never was before which all things earthly must quail.

And this power of the Press is one that must of necessity grow stronger and stronger with every new sunrise.

If wrong hates the light and cannot thrive in the light, it is plain that from now on it will have a harder time than ever; for the publicity that newspapers give is steadily on the increase, and in that publicity nothing but the clean and the wholesome can endure.
